Highlights

2018 Georgia OBGyn Society Distinguished Service Award
Marion Howard, Ph.D.

Dr. Howard is a Professor Emeritus, Department of Gynecology and Obstetrics at Emory University. Following her work on early childbearing and childrearing at Yale University and George Washington University in the late 60s and early 70s, Howard joined the Emory faculty and began developing innovative programs and services to reduce the incidence of pregnancy and sexually transmitted infections among younger teens. In 1997, Howard was honored at the White House by the National Campaign to Prevent Teen Pregnancy for the nationwide impact her programs and research have had on the field of adolescent pregnancy prevention. In 1999, the unique continuity of care clinical model for teens at Grady Memorial Hospital, under Howard’s direction, earned Grady Health System the Jim Wright Vulnerable Populations award, the most prestigious award given by the National Association of Public Hospitals and Health Systems. Howard has been invited to testify before numerous congressional committees and to speak and/or train in 38 of the 50 United States and internationally. In 2000, Howard conceptualized the need for a university research center to advance knowledge about adolescent sexuality and promote strategies for healthy transitions to adulthood. A lead gift for the new Jane Fonda Center at Emory University came from Jane Fonda, who also endowed a Marion Howard Chair in Adolescent Reproductive Health.
